Discourse analysis is the approaches to analyze written, vocal, or sign language use or any significant semiotic event. The objects of discourse analysis include discourse writing, conversation, and discourse competence. Learning processes from language form to language function or to language use in accordance with the needs of learners. Savignon proposed the relationship between technology, mathematics, and science and the impact of semiotic transcoding—i.e., symbolic data, visual images, and digital media. The study also aims to raise awareness of second language teachers on how animated films might influence learners' attitudes towards language learning. Multimodal discourse analysis (MDA) is introduced to explore how digital technology, visual reasoning, and multimedia analysis can be used to enhance language learning and teaching. The study of discourse competence owes discourse analysis and text linguistics the repertoire of notions, concepts, and terms language teaching theorists may use to understand the role of discourse in language learning and teaching. There are many approaches to analyze discourse, and the study of discourse competence is essential. A critical teacher teaches with attitude, and this attitude and way of thinking and teaching consist of perhaps a definition. Advocates of critical approaches to second language teaching are interested in relationships between language learning and social change. The discipline of linguistics has been dedicated to providing information on language and language analysis, and to providing the discipline of linguistics with the infrastructure necessary to function in the digital world. Recent years have seen many students develop a fixed mindset as a result of the national focus on raising test scores.
